TRAINING PACK

Health & Safety Cornwall

As Chartered Practitioners in safety and health we pride ourselves in delivering courses in all subjects relating to health and safety, food and fire prevention which are up to date and entertaining as well as informative.

The benefits of such training are that organisations and businesses can feel confident that staff who undertake such training are trained to the highest level by professionals in related subjects to national standards. Our objective is not only to deliver quality training but to change hearts and minds so that health and safety becomes an integral part of everyone's work activity.

Unlike some other providers A1 Health and Safety do not just offer training by professionals but also provide expert advice so that students gain confidence to carry out their legal responsibilities on their own.

Lecturers at A1 Health and Safety are from a variety of specialised professional backgrounds. Most have previous enforcement experience either in health and safety, food or fire prevention. Other lecturers have specialised knowledge and experience in such subjects as occupational health, ergonomics, hazardous substances, construction and stress management.

A1 Health and Safety's aim is to provide informative, interesting training through the use of innovative state of the art equipment and material. Lecturers also offer workplace practical support to ensure skills taught are implemented to the highest standards.

A1 Health and Safety prices are competitive and all statutory training is tax deductible so there is no need to compromise on cost or training content. All prices included are exclusive of VAT.

At A1 Health and Safety our mission is to add value to your training needs whilst being the most beneficial training provider available.

Confidence and Assertiveness

Being assertive is something you may normally consider confident people do naturally. If you are trying to improve your confidence, then assertiveness training could really help you. Learning to act and speak in a more assertive way could help you overcome several obstacles in your life such as shyness, low self esteem and a lack of confidence.

This course includes:

- ◆ Get Motivated! - An examination of the underlying causes of low self esteem and confidence and looking at the ways to change the way you and others perceive you by changing your thought processes;
- ◆ Assertiveness – Learning how to say what you want;
- ◆ Stress – What it is and how to manage it;
- ◆ Overview & Course assessment

Problem Solving & Decision Making

Much of what managers and supervisors do is solve problems and make decisions. New managers and supervisors, in particular, often make solve problems and decisions by reacting to them. They are "under the gun", stressed and very short for time. Consequently, when they encounter a new problem or decision they must make, they react with a decision that seemed to work before. It's easy with this approach to get stuck in a circle of solving the same problem over and over again. Therefore:

This course has been designed for use with all levels of staff up to management level and is intended to help participants develop better problem solving and decision making skills, and encourage analytical thinking.

By the end of the course participants will be able to:

- ◆ Describe a process for problem solving;
- ◆ Describe techniques that will help an objective problem solving process;
- ◆ Describe how to use a creative thinking technique to generate ideas;
- ◆ Understand how to apply objective decision making to typical workplace scenarios.

First Time Leadership

As more and more companies move towards a flatter, team-based structure, team leaders are having to learn to combine a leadership role with full-time operational responsibilities.

This training course is aimed at developing core leadership skills in people who are new to this demanding role. It encourages your people to focus on what leaders do, rather than who they are, so they can break their new responsibilities into manageable and achievable stages of development

This course has been designed for use with staff to a new supervisory or team leader role and is intended to help participants identify what constitutes effective team leadership and understand the impact effective leadership can have in the workplace.

By the end of the course participants will be able to:

- ◆ Describe what leadership and management mean;
- ◆ Understand different leadership styles;
- ◆ Describe the skills and attributes of a good leader;
- ◆ Understand the impact the leader can have on motivation and therefore performance;
- ◆ Reflect on their own role as leaders and areas for development within it.

Delivering A Great Service

Good customer service is the lifeblood of any business. You can offer promotions and slash prices to bring in as many new customers as you want, but unless you can get some of those customers to come back, your business won't be profitable for long.

Good customer service is all about bringing customers back. And about sending them away happy – happy enough to pass positive feedback about your business along to others, who may then try the product or service you offer for themselves and in their turn become repeat customers.

This course has been designed for use with staff at all levels and is intended to help participants identify what makes excellent customer service and the specific skills they will each need to be able to deliver great service.

By the end of the course participants will be able to:

- ◆ Describe what excellent customer service looks like;
- ◆ Understand how perception and reality might be different;
- ◆ Recognise the barriers that can affect good service;
- ◆ Describe the skills needed to deliver a great service;
- ◆ Understand the difference between skill and attitude;
- ◆ Explore areas for improvement within the workplace that might hinder excellent service.

Coaching Skills for Managers

Performance coaching (which expression includes life, career, fitness, business, executive, finance and any other category of coaching in the modern sense of the word) is about communicating in a way that enhances understanding, clarity, awareness, responsibility, self-belief and productive relationships.

This course has been designed for use with team leaders, supervisors and managers and is intended to help participants develop coaching skills to support and develop staff in the workplace.

By the end of the course participants will be able to:

- ◆ Describe what coaching is and what it is not!;
- ◆ Identify the skills that managers will need to be an effective workplace coach;
- ◆ Understand how to structure a coaching session with staff members;
- ◆ Understand how to coach for development and higher performance;
- ◆ Be able to suggest a useful framework for a coaching meeting.

Building the Team

There are many benefits to working in a team. Take combined skills for instance. A team has better combined skills than any one of its members. An idea expressed in a team can have a snowball effect, inspiring new ideas that the members might not have thought of on their own. They become a natural learning environment, training each other in new skills.

This course has been designed for use with a newly formed team in order to build better relationships and understanding between team members. Alternatively, it can also be used with a more established team to identify any weaknesses in the way the team work or develop a particular team-working element.

It contains fun elements to encourage better relationships and rapport within the team, as well as some strong key learning points about positive team-working.

By the end of the course, participants will:

- ◆ Know more about their colleagues;
- ◆ Be able to describe what makes a high performance team;
- ◆ Understand the importance of playing to different strengths and skills;
- ◆ Recognise the need for clear and effective communication.

Communication Skills

Good communication skills are skills that facilitate people to communicate effectively with one another. Effectual communication engages the choice of the best communications channel, the technical know-how to use the channel, the presentation of information to the target audience, and the skill to understand responses received from others. Self development, interpersonal skills, mutual understanding, mutual cooperation and trust is also important to set a complete channel of most effective and winning communication skills.

The course has been designed for use with all levels of staff and is intended to help participants identify what makes effective communication and the specific skills they will need in order to be effective communicators.

By the end of the course participants will be able to:

- ◆ Describe barriers to communication and how to overcome them;
- ◆ Explain how to build rapport with others;
- ◆ Recognise the importance of listening and not making assumptions;
- ◆ Describe how to make communication clear and the importance of clarity;
- ◆ Understand that what is meant is not what is always understood (intention vs perception);
- ◆ Recognise the importance of asking open questions to clarify understanding;
- ◆ Describe their experience of a team activity and the key learning points about communication from that.
